Vision

Realization of asymbiotic society

By promoting decent work by improving the working environment for foreign workers, we will create a win-win relationship for foreigners working with companies and realize a symbiotic society between Japanese and foreigners. By doing so, we aim to further develop Japan, where the birthrate is declining and the population is aging, and to aim to be a country which foreigners can feel "I am glad I came to Japan and I am glad I worked in Japan."

 Supporting foreigners who want to be active in  Japan

prologue

Come to like about Japan. Connect to a future full of hope.

Currently in Japan, which has become an aging society in recent years, the working population of young people has decreased, and a shortage of human resources has been apparent in various industries such as an construction industry and a nursing care industry.

While Japan needs a large number of workers, foreigners residing in Japan with a status of residence of "training" or "technical intern training" since 1993 can conduct training or technical intern training with compensation. The "Ginou Jishu seido (a system of technical intern training)" has been started, and young human resources from other countries, mainly in Asia, have worked in Japan to support Japan's production.

On the other hand, as human rights issues have been pointed out in the international community, there are many foreign workers who are forced into a harsh working environment at some companies. And in April 2019, "Tokuteiginou (Specific Skills)" was established as a new foreign worker policy. In that environment

In that environment, the "Japan Leading Edge Foundation" (JLEF Foundation) has been established with the aim of building a society that can produce human resources who can play an active role in the world. Also, JLEF Foundation supports foreign worker who came to Japan saying "I like Japan" and "I want to come to Japan" and They do Not say "I hate Japan". We will support technical intern trainees and foreigners with specific skills from other countries to prevent them from returning to Japan. JLEF Foundation contributes to mutual understanding and international goodwill with foreigners, and supports foreign workers to utilize the technical intern training system and the specified skill system.
